If your hymen opening is too tight to allow for tampon insertion, you can stretch it yourself. This should be done gently and slowly, over many days or weeks. As with tampon insertion, stop if it feels painful. Here's how you do it: First, put some K-Y Jelly on your finger. (Don't use petroleum jelly or any lotion that contains perfumes or chemical additives.) Insert your finger into your vaginal opening as far as is comfortable. Then apply pressure by pressing downward toward the anus. Keep the pressure on for a few minutes, then release it. You can repeat this several times during each session. The next time, increase the pressure. Slowly work your way up to inserting two fingers. Once you can do that, apply pressure to the sides of the vaginal entrance, too. Continue the sessions until you can comfortably insert a tampon.

If you continue masturbating long enough, you may have an orgasm. (Some other terms for having an orgasm are "climaxing," "coming," and "getting off.") Orgasm is a release of tension and excitement that builds up in the body during sexual arousal. It's a bit difficult to explain exactly what an orgasm feels like. For one thing, an orgasm can vary from one time to the next. Some orgasms are very powerful and strong. Others are less intense. A less intense one might be described as a "lovely shivery feeling." A powerful one might feel like an explosion, a spasm of intense sexual pleasure that begins in the genitals and pulses throughout the body. Most people agree that an orgasm is a very good feeling.

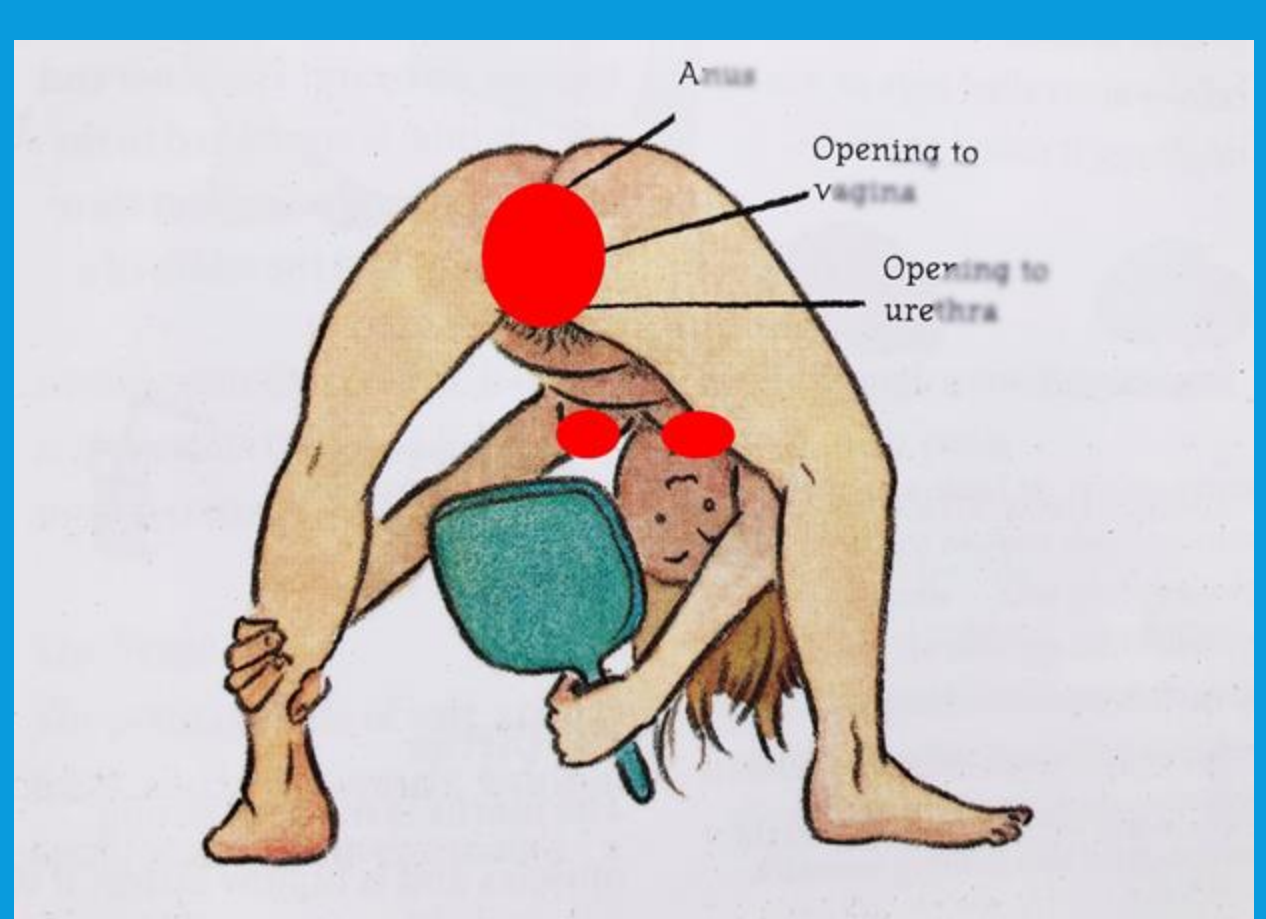

You may not have an orgasm every time you masturbate. For one thing, you may stop before you get to the point of orgasm. Also, having an orgasm means learning what arouses your body. It may take a bit of practice. That's why experts say that masturbation is an excellent way of learning how your body reacts and of practicing for your adult sex life.

Grandad and Milly are back for another adventure, this time honoring the past and welcoming a more inclusive future with a Pride parade.

After Milly and Grandad discover a Pride flag in Grandad's attic, this adorable pair are motivated to start a parade in their small town. Activism and celebration go hand in hand as the town gathers to help "build a world where everyone is proud to be themselves."

This touching sequel to the Stonewall Book Award Honoree Grandad's Camper is a heartwarming tale about the power of support and community.

BDSM

D/S is a term usually used to describe dominance and submission play, in which one partner "tops" and another "bottoms" and/or one partner is dominating and another submitting. The top or bottom may be of any gender, and the action may involve extending pleasure past a point of physical or emotional comfort; "punishing" a partner via humiliation, sensory play, or withholding of sexual activities; and utilizing bondage sensation play, or verbal enactments. SM or S/M is an abbreviation for sadomasochism, or sadomasochism, which means that one partner is giving pain, and the other is receiving it (masochism). The B in BDSM usually refers to bondage.

BDSM educators recommend what's often known as the SSC rule: safe, sane, and consensual.

D/S may also incorporate sensory play, age, or other "kinky" sensory activities. People engaging in D/S play incorporate phrases or gestures into their play: phrases or gestures by both to express thresholds or safewords. Saying a safeword stops or slows activity at any time.

Without question, D/S or BDSM play is more discussed than other sexual activities. D/S roles should be discussed. A person can be tops, bottoms, or both, or who enjoy both roles. What role they choose is the role that they want. Stay self-aware if you're involved with D/S play. Some people use it as a way of making an abusive relationship more enjoyable or to em

Deeper manual sex

More involved, as it were, manual sex is colloquially called fisting, but that's not because you make a fist and try to put it into a vagina or anus, which is unlikely to be anything but painful, if not impossible. Rather, this kind of manual sex involves starting with one or two gloved fingers (and lube, added as you go) and slowly working up to more, as it is—and only if it is—pleasurable for the receptive partner. If a whole hand is wanted by both partners, and four fingers feel good, the performing partner can then tuck his or her thumb into their palm or inside the fingers to make the whole hand as slim as possible, and then slide upward. Once it's all inside, that partner can then turn the hand back and forth, slowly open the fingers up gently and rhythmically, or go up and down, as is comfortable for their partner.

Fisting isn't that common, and the more fingers we're talking about, the less common it becomes. Fewer people will likely be interested in it, especially at the beginning of their sex lives, and more people are generally interested in vaginal fisting than anal fisting. While both canals really can make room for that much inside, and it can feel good, this can be hard to imagine if we're still getting used to the idea of single fingers, a penis, or a dildo inside the vagina or anus. As with any sort of entry to the vagina or anus, if the idea of deep manual sex makes you very nervous, it's smarter to opt out, because being scared or nervous not only inhibits arousal but also keeps the muscles of both canals from relaxing enough for deeper entry to be comfortable and pleasurable.

Very deep manual sex carries higher STI risks than less intrusive manual sex does.

else, if you're interested in an activity and your partner just really isn't, don't push.
STI risk: No risk (as long as skin is not broken and items used or shared are clean).
Pregnancy risk: No risk.

Body Fluid or Blood Play

What is it, and how do I do it?

Some people enjoy any number of body fluids sexually ejaculate, vaginal fluids, menses, urine, or blood. They may simply enjoy tasting, feeling, or smelling them during sexual activities, or they may engage in activities specific to enjoying those fluids, such as "golden showers" (being urinated on) or having a partner ejaculate on them. Some enjoy this because it feels taboo, or naughty, to have intimate contact with body fluids. For others, fluid play may be enjoyable because a certain intimacy or sacredness is experienced in fluid bonding.

But from an infection and disease perspective, fluid play can be dangerous, especially when body fluids have contact with incredibly sensitive sites like the eyes. Whereas urine itself is sterile, it does pass through the urethra, where an infection may be present. Ejaculate can carry several different infections. Contact with blood, or cutting or piercing partners in any way, opens the door to some of the deadliest diseases and infections out there, like hepatitis B and HIV.

So, for the most part, this sort of play is quite risky, especially for younger couples, the majority of whom have not had sound or regular sexual health care. Most younger people have not had safer sex

STI risk: Very high risk.

Pregnancy risk: No risk, unless semen comes into contact with a vulva.

Sex Toys

What is it, and how do I do it?

Sex toys come in many varieties. From vibrators—electric and battery-operated, big and small, swanky and silly—to silicone dildos, anal plugs to masturbation sleeves, cock rings to clitoral suction devices, toys and tools run the gamut. People use them for masturbation as well as for partnered sex, by themselves or in conjunction with other activities.

Generally, sex toys aren't available for purchase by minors and are sold in sex toy shops, through catalogs, and on Internet sites. Some people also make their own sex toys or use household objects as sexual toys or aids: electric toothbrushes, plastic bottles, socks, pillows, and all sorts of other objects.

So long as simple directions are followed for items sold as sex toys, they're usually safe for use. For instance, using something electrical in a bathtub isn't safe or smart, and using an item not designed for anal use—and without a flared base—in the anus is a bad idea. Anything with sharp edges should generally not be used on or in the genitalia. You must be able to cover with a latex barrier anything that is being used as a sex toy, especially if it is shared, or be able to boil it; otherwise, you could brew and pass around infections and bacteria. Shared (and uncovered) toys are often a very common route for infections spread between female partners, friction—like intercourse, masturbation, or anal sex—most people want or need lubricant and find that it increases their pleasure and sexual enjoyment. Ain't nothing wrong with that!

Dental Dams

Dental dams are used for cunnilingus or analingus.

How to use a dental dam:

Most dams have a light talc coating, so first, rinse off the talc with water, because it can cause some irritation. Apply lubricant to the genitalia where the dam will be placed. Then, open up the dam—it's like a little sheet of latex when opened—and spread it over the vulva. You or your partner can then hold the dam in place with your hands during the activity.

Dental dams are often harder to find than condoms. Whereas most online safe sex and sex toy suppliers sell them, many pharmacies that sell condoms and lubes do not. You can also obtain them at medical supply stores. If you cannot find a source for dental dams, you may also adapt a condom as directed in the Helpful Hints or use kitchen plastic wrap. You can use the plastic wrap the same way you'd use a dam. For cunnilingus, you can wrap the cling-film dam around the wearer's thighs so no one has to hold the barrier in place with their hands.

Helpful Hints

► Use one side—once. Always keep the same side of the dam or cling film against the body. You can't flip-flop dams and have them work effectively—only one side may be used. Dental dams cannot be reused to be effective against the spread of disease or infection.

► You can make a dam out of a latex condom. To use a condom as a dental dam for cunnilingus or analingus, simply cut the condom with a clean pair of scissors down the middle, lengthwise, and open it up.

► You can also make a dam out of a latex glove. There are a few ways to do this: you can cut off the fingers and base of the glove
